HIS LEG CUT OFF, HUSBAND'S SHOT BOY SKATER ENDS

was he of the ice that 'tis even whispered Freddie found gliding over frozer than the warmth of the school-room His skating costume was a Norwegian winter outfit which he won in the Jer sey State races last winter.

Saturday afternoon Freddie sat alone in the kitchen of his mother's home on Grove street. He heard the merry jingle of hundreds of his former companions on the big mill race a short block away. Tears streamed down his face as he glanced at the cause of his grief. His right leg had been amputated last menth after a fall from a Pennsylvania train. It pained him fearfully, his head buzzed and there was it one to say a kind word but his devoted mother, who felt his misfortune more keenly than he did.

Pleading with his mother to run over to a relative nearby and bring over a playmate, he went to the bureau and found a revolver. Next he brought ou nearby. Then he sat down and wrote: "Mother: I am tired of living. All the "Mother: I am tired of living. All the other boys are having fun and I ain't. My leg hurts me. Something funny buzzes in my head. Good-oye, mamma; I killed myself-wasn't anyone else."

Freddie's crippled body was cold and rigid when his mother returned. The bullet had pierced his brain. His two cratches lay in the open doorway. Today hundreds of his little friends crowd about his bier for a farewell to the champion skater of them all.

who was found nearly frozen to death. but it is thought to-day that they may be too late. He had been an outcast for months. Too weak to work if he had found anything to do, he selden had over one scanty meal a day. He erawled into any sheltered spot could find to sleep, and each day he became thinner and thinner until he was scarcely able to walk.

Friday he had a cup of oatmeal. After that nothing until last night.
With both feet frozen he was found crumpled up in an areaway the morgue and Bellevue Hospital's new building, by William Cominsky, a morgue attendant, who had heard him

The skin was peeled from his nose and face. After several hours work on him in Bellevue he became conscious and told his story.

"I have—I had." he corrected, "no friends. no home." he said, as he looked up gratefully at the doctors who were trying to save his life.

FOUR-HORSE TEAM IN BRIDGE RUNAWAY

Maddened Animals Drag Heavy Truck to Wreck, Injuring Their Driver.

Traffic on the Williamsburg Bridge was tied up for an hour to-day, following an exciting runaway, which will probably cost Peter Sullivan. of No. 16 Monroe street, Hoboken, his right hand, Sullivan was driving a four-horse team, owned by the Jennings Truck Company, of Jersey City. He had 100 hogs in his truck. When the team reached the head of the grade leading to the Brooklyn entrance to the bridge. Sullivan lost his seat trying to untangle the lines. He fell to the roadway, and before he could scramble out of the way the forward wheel passed over his right hand. Sullivan's fall and ories frightened the horses, and they leaped forward in alarm. Headed down grade, they gathared speed and began a mad dash boward Brooklyn.

A dozen or more trucks were grazed by the flying vehicle, but all managed to escape destruction. The policemen at the Brooklyn gate heard the noise of the runaway and closed the gate to stop the team. When within several hundred feet of the gate one of the leaders slipped and fell, dragging the other three horses after him. The truck came to a standstill.

Two of the horses were severely crushed. For nearly an hour half a untangle the horses, harness and truck
